Our Story

Meilin Lau, circa 1985

Mayway is a multigenerational family business importing and distributing traditional Chinese medicine. In 1969, our parents escaped communism in China to open a tiny herb shop in San Francisco's Chinatown. Inspired by their hopes for the future and to honor their adopted country, they named it Mayway 美威 "America is Mighty".

Our grandfather was the village herbalist and our parents served the Chinese community in the San Francisco Bay Area. As first-generation Americans, we envision a future in which traditional Chinese medicine is fully integrated into American life. By ensuring the exceptional quality and authenticity of our products through responsible sourcing and conscientious manufacturing, we strengthen your practice and foster the acceptance of and respect for traditional Chinese medicine in this country.

A poet at heart, our father named our house label Plum Flower™, one of the "Four Gentlemen" (or Four Noble Ones) of Chinese culture. Plum, orchid, bamboo, and chrysanthemum embody the Confucian concept of junzi, or "gentlemen" representing noble character and morality. Plum flowers bloom in the desolation of winter, serving as a metaphor for inner beauty, endurance and resilience. Like our parents, we believe that what you get in a Plum Flower™ product should and does reflect our family's history and values, and our commitment to high quality and service.

Fifty years later, we remain at the forefront of raising the quality standards of herbal products. We are deeply grateful to be a part of the TCM community, enjoy working together as closely as four siblings can, and cherish the friendships, partnerships and trust with which you've honored us.

Thank you for your support of Mayway, and of real Chinese Medicine.

Our Brands

Plum Flower™

Our house label, Plum Flower™ includes a wide range of species-authenticated unsulfured herbs and classical and modern formulations in teapill, tablet and extract forms. All are produced according to Chinese Pharmacopoeia standards. We maintain the essence and wisdom of ancient herbal traditions while applying advanced manufacturing and quality standards.

Bamboo Pharmacy™ is a consumer-friendly line consisting of a short-list of highly effective herbal products that address every day health concerns. Bamboo Pharmacy's easy-to-understand product names and descriptions encourage consumers and patients to trust and try traditional Chinese medicine, possibly for the first time.

MIN SHAN®

Mayway is the proud distributor of the original Min Shan® teapills made by the renowned Lanzhou Foci Pharmaceutical Co. Ltd. since 1929. A contributor to the Chinese Pharmacopoeia, Lanzhou Foci pioneered the manufacturing of extracted and condensed teapills, winning numerous awards for quality and excellence.

Gold Gryphon®

Gold Gryphon® is the house label of Mayway's herb processing facility in China, Mayway Hebei. The herbs adhere to similar quality standards and are subject to most of the same testing parameters as Plum Flower™ Premier Quality Herbs™, and are stocked when unsulfured herbs are out of season or otherwise unavailable.

Our Specialties

Teapills

• Optimally extracted • Convenient • Powerful
Here at Mayway we call extracted, condensed pills "Teapills" to emphasize that they're made from a "tea", or more precisely, a decoction. The computer controlled extraction process includes an essential oil recovery system, and a low temperature vacuum condensing process. A small amount of powdered herbs from the formula is added to the condensed decoction to create a paste that is cut and then rolled into pills. Teapills can be prescribed in combination with excellent clinical success.

Learn more and watch videos on how they're made at mayway.com/teapills

Extract Powders/Granules

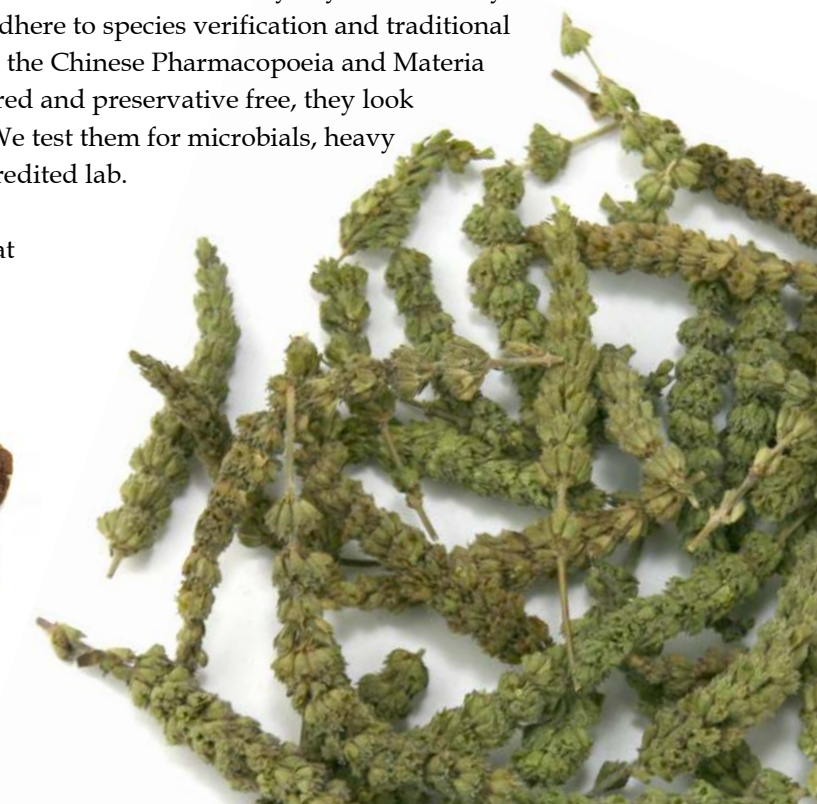

• Full spectrum • Zero fillers • Fully dissolvable
Extract powders and granules are analogous to instant coffee. Essentially, they are dried decoctions, so when you reconstitute them with warm water, the result is a decoction. In Traditional Chinese Medicine, herbal extracts are "full spectrum" extracts that reflect the natural constituent yield that is obtained from a water-based extraction. Our extract powder formulas are pure--zero fillers or excipients, while single herb extracts contain only the minimal amount of dextrin necessary to stabilize them.

Herbs

• Sustainably sourced • Species verified • Preservative free
We source and process our own herbs at our Mayway Hebei facility. We work directly with growers, and adhere to species verification and traditional processing techniques outlined in the Chinese Pharmacopoeia and Materia Medica. Our herbs are beautiful--unsulfured and preservative free, they look natural, and taste and function the way they should. We test them for microbials, heavy metals, and pesticides at our on-site, ISO/IEC 17025 accredited lab.

Teapills, Tablets & Extract Powders

- Quality you can trust
- Internationally GMP certified manufacturers licensed for TCM and pharmaceutical drugs
- Geo-authentic and species-verified ingredients of medicinal grade

- Herbs are decocted and condensed together to encourage therapeutic herbal synergy
- Retained essential oils for a more complete herbal profile
- Lab tested for quality
- Certificates of Analysis for every batch

Carefully chosen ingredients, exceptional manufacturing partners, and Pharmacopoeia-based quality and testing standards ensure that our products are safe and effective.

However, we believe that the essence of Chinese Medicine, its power, is not something that is easily quantified. The manufacturing of a traditional Chinese medicine is not just a scientific process, but an art resulting from a deep understanding of herbs and an experienced hand.

While our products are made in carefully controlled GMP environments, much of the character and quality of the final product is based on a set of human choices: the quality of starting materials, the large and small decisions made during processing, and a commitment to quality in every aspect. The results of these choices are not always quantifiable, but the care and attention to detail in their creation can be experienced in the appearance, smell, taste, and effects of any of our products.

Plum Flower™ Premier Quality Herbs™

Our herbs look, smell, taste and function as they should!

Generations of experienced herb growers and processors with modern quality controls make the best herbs to support your practice!

• Proper climate and soil conditions are crucial to the medicinal qualities of herbs, so we select dao-di geo-authentic herbs to guarantee quality.

• We work directly with growers and help educate them on the importance of reducing pesticides and sustainable cultivation practices.

• Most of our herbs are processed on site at Mayway Hebei for increased freshness and potency.

• We scientifically identify and process herbs according to the standards of the Chinese Pharmacopoeia.

• Proprietary processing methods allow us to avoid the prevalent use of sulfur dioxide fumigation, a preservative also used to artificially enhance the appearance of herbs.

• We combine special cutting and drying techniques with a meticulous vacuum packing and nitrogen injection process that allows us to provide high quality, clean herbs without preservatives.

• We carefully monitor our Plum Flower™ Premier Quality Herbs™ for impurities in our in-house ISO/IEC 17025 certified lab where we perform physical and microbiological tests. Certificates of analysis are available for every batch.

Plum Flower™ Premier Quality Herbs™

Whole Herbs, Powders & Extracts

Whole & Powdered Herbs

Plum Flower™ Premier Quality may look different (generally darker and with more natural venation, fibers and other identifying characteristics) than common sulfured herbs. Many herbs also have specially developed cutting styles to better suit the lack of preservatives. When Plum Flower™ herbs are unavailable we may offer Gold Gryphon® herbs, which meet the same quality assurance standards as Plum Flower™ but contain sulfur dioxide residues that may exceed 50 mg/kg. Most single herbs are supplied in 500 gram (1.1 lb.) packages.

Please Note:

Unsulfured herbs may have a shorter shelf life after opening due to the lack of preservatives. We recommend refrigerating oily or sugary root herbs and fruits such as Tao ren, Mai men dong and Gou qi zi after opening.

Call us at 1-800-2-MAYWAY with any questions or email inquiries to customerservice@mayway.com

Extract Powders

Our Plum Flower™ full spectrum extract powders are supplied in 100 gram bottles and are made with unsulfured herbs when possible (approximately 97% of our herbs are unsulfured). Herbs with sulfur dioxide residues exceeding 10 mg/kg are noted on bottle. As our extracts contain little to no fillers, please keep in a cool, dry place after opening. Refrigeration is ideal for freshness and stability.

Dosages & Administration Techniques of Chinese Herbal Formulas to Veterinary Patients

Robert J. Silver, DVM, MS
 Excerpted from: Introductory Class: IVAS Basic Course on TCM Herbal Medicine

The successful use of botanical preparations in the treatment of veterinary patients depends upon several factors. Accurate diagnosis and appropriate herbal prescribing are no less important than giving the appropriate amount of herbal material at the appropriate frequency of administration. In classical Chinese herbal practices, standardized weights and measures were used to describe the amount of each herb in a formula. These measurements have been established since the Tang Dynasty:

1 jin or catty = 16 liang or tael
 1 liang = 10 qian
 1 qian = 10 fen
 1 fen = 10 li
 1 liang = 31.25 grams.

Because this is an awkward number to work with, in 1979 the Peoples Republic of China established simpler metric equivalencies for traditional weight measures. They are:

1 liang = 30 grams
 1 qian = 3.0 grams
 1 fen = 0.3 grams
 1 li = 0.03 grams

In traditional Chinese herbal medicine, the common dosage for most of the available ingredients in an herbal formula is between 1-3 qian or 3-10 grams. Hard, heavy, moderate and bland substances are used in larger dosages. Light, toxic, and strongly flavored substances are used in small dosages. Thus, flowers, leaves and aromatic herbs are used in relatively small dosages. Roots, fruits and rich and heavy substances are prescribed in larger dosages. Minerals and shells are prescribed in the heaviest dosages, often as high as 1 liang or 30 grams per formula.

There is variation in the appropriate dosage for a given species and weight class based upon individual considerations. These considerations include the vital force of the patient and the strength of the Spleen in its ability to assimilate the herbal formula. Sensitive individuals may need to be dosed at lower dosages to begin with and then gradually have the dosage increased to the optimal amount.

Although one cannot discount the possibility of adverse reactions, the toxicity of herbal formulas to veterinary patients is quite low. This is due in part, to the considerations involved in the administration of adequate amounts of herbal material to be toxic. Feline patients with their increased sensitivity to many toxic compounds do not seem to be affected more differently (or adversely) by herbal compounds than dogs or horses. Horses, because of their digestive systems' superior adaptation to using plant material for food, need a much proportionately lower (by weight) dosage of herbal material to produce the same level of efficacy.

Whether the veterinary patient has been prescribed a pharmaceutical, or an herbal medication, healing will not occur unless the patient gets an adequate amount of the medication, and has it given at the necessary frequency. Even the most elaborate and sophisticated diagnostic procedures are worthless in the face of inadequate therapeutic dosages.

My strategy in providing an adequate dosage to my patients is to try to give the largest tolerable dosage possible at twice daily intervals for 1-2 weeks to evaluate the suitability of the prescription for that patient's condition. This aggressive dosing strategy must be weighed against the risks of weakening an already weakened patient, allergic reactions, and adverse palatability issues.

When any side-effects occur from over-administration of an herbal formula, I will suggest that the patient's dose be reduced or discontinued temporarily until the side-effects subside, and then gradually increase the dosage when deemed safe to do so. Possible side-effects include: diarrhea, vomiting, lethargy, anorexia, drooling and behavioral changes.

The palatability of herbal medications is a major consideration with each patient's dispensing. Herbs come in several forms, and the choice of the appropriate form is crucial to the successful program of herbal therapy. Many herbal programs are designed to be given over long periods of time (especially for constitutional or tonic prescribing). Therefore it is important to find a form of herbal medication that will not be a chore for the veterinary patient's human companion to administer. The preferred route of administration in my practice is to put the herbs in the food.

Herbs come as powders, as crude herbs to be decocted, as capsules, tablets, and as alcohol extracts. Each format has its own virtues, and its own difficulties in administration. Alcohol extracts need to have the alcohol dispelled and diluted with boiling hot water for 10-15 minutes.

The resultant lower alcohol "tea" can then be placed in food or directly dropped into the animal's mouth. Herbal decoctions or teas are time consuming for the human companion to prepare, and palatability may be a significant issue, due to the strong tastes and larger volumes needed to ingest for effective therapy.

Pills, powders and capsules can be administered as for standard pharmaceutical preparations. Honey, molasses, clam juice, tuna juice, or other highly palatable food stuffs can be used to conceal the taste and texture of the herbal prescriptions.

Master Tung's Magic Points in the Aftermath of the Coronavirus

By Susan Johnson, L.Ac.

Plum Flower™ Solitary Hermit or Du Huo Ji Sheng Wan is one of the most-used Chinese herbal formulas in veterinary practice. It treats pain conditions due to a combination of wind-cold-dampness accumulation and an underlying deficiency of the Liver and Kidneys, Qi and Blood, which is seen most frequently in older animals with a tendency to seek heat.

Stone-K & Healthy Urinary Function

Stone-K Formula is intended for Shí lín 石淋 or “Stone Obstruction” with Qi stagnation, retention of Dampness in the Lower Jiao, and underlying Kidney Qi deficiency since sufficient Kidney Qi is necessary to promote normal urinary function. The presence of Heat or Damp-Heat in this region causes the formation of urinary obstruction or lín zhèng 淋症.

In a five-hospital study in China, over 50% of the participants experienced complete resolution of their symptoms. This herbal approach offers a proven, non-pharmaceutical option for practitioners to support healthy urinary function.
